

Public Seminar

The Impact of Developmental Trauma on Sensory Processing

Who should attend

Training event for pre and post adoption workers, and other professionals working with children who have experienced developmental trauma, and pre and post adoptive parents and other permanent carers

Trainer

Karen Hazard is owner and director of Children's Sensory Therapy Ltd. She is an Occupational Therapist who has been working in the field of Paediatrics for the last 20 years. She is an Advanced Practitioner in Sensory Integration and is a certified Sensory Attachment Intervention Practitioner. Nicola Macukewicz has been an Occupational Therapist for the past 21 years, specializing in Paediatrics, Trauma and Autism. She also has training in Sensory Integration and Sensory Attachment Intervention.

Children who have experienced Developmental Trauma can have altered Sensory Processing

Sensory Processing, combined with Attachment Theory, recognizes the need to target the areas of the brain that are the source of the dysfunction and works on re-wiring the brains of children with developmental trauma. This can be done through understanding the child's sensory needs and developing sensory regulating strategies that can help the child dampen down over-responsive senses and activate under-responsive ones. This in turn enables higher level sensory, emotional and cognitive functioning and allows for attachment/trauma-focused therapies to then work on offering effective emotional co-regulation, deepening connections, and co-creating meaningful narratives for young people in order to make better sense of themselves.
